

March 15, 2020

We know this is a disruptive and concerning time and we understand there are lots of questions regarding this very dynamic situation and various, ongoing University updates. The OUB team is currently working with our colleagues at the University and in both A&S and CALS to understand the most current information and how they relate to the biological sciences major. We are also working to shift our operations to allow us to work remotely as soon as possible.

At this time, we ask that people refrain from coming to the OUB and that all questions and concerns be communicated via email bioadvising@cornell.edu or by calling the OUB 607-255-5233.

Students in the major may still schedule an appointment with an OUB advisor via the link below (if you are not able to schedule via the link below, please call the OUB office). Rather than meeting face to face, the OUB advisor will email you to make arrangements to connect via phone or a Zoom meeting.

Drop-in appts with Student Advisors have been canceled for the remainder of the semester.

For now, we encourage you to please follow all guidelines to minimize spread of COVID-19, solidify your plans for the remainder of the semester and take care of yourself.

We will be emailing our students and faculty with more information as soon as possible.

All best during this difficult time,

Amy, Beth, Cole, Jeff, Kristy, Laura and Megan
